GOLDEN NUGGETS FOR SALLOW PEOPLE

WAGNER MADE IT HOT.

The Composer's Trick When Money and Firewood Were Scarce.

Here is an anecdote of Wagner's early life as related by List: "Wagner, Bulow and I were all quite young when we lived together in Leipzig and had a good time—that is, I enjoyed myself, but Wagner was already fermenting with his political and philosophical ideas, and our prosaic circumstances offered little ground for the idealists of the future. We called Bulow 'Kritikus' and we, especially I, always feared his sharp tongue a little. Of course all of us had little money, but Wagner put our slender purse to great strains. He could not bear money worries, and we let him feel them as little as possible.

"Once, after a long autumn, it became cold suddenly, and Wagner with his 'nerves' suffered from the sudden change in the temperature. He demanded a heated room at once.

For two whole days the debate raged between him and Bulow as to the immediate purchase of wood with our reduced purse.

"I was not asked, because Bulow knew that I would yield, but he as treasurer contended that it was ridiculous to buy wood in the month of September. 'But I am freezing,' said Wagner in a rage, to which the inflexible Bulow suggested that he go out and get warm by running or warm himself by his muse. Laughing at his cheap, spiteful advice, Bulow and I went out, but when we returned after two hours we were thunderstruck to find Wagner in the room heated to saturation. He sat at his writing table deep in his work. His face was red.

"Where?" began Bulow, but the words stuck in his throat, for a glance around the room showed him how Wagner had helped himself. Several chairs and our work tables lay on the floor, permanently crippled. Wagner had cut off their legs and made the fire with them. Bulow was speechless with rage, but I stood at the door and laughed till the tears came at this ingenious way of helping oneself. Bulow lamented that we would have to replace the landlady's chairs and tables and that he could not sit down or work.

"Wagner answered spitefully: 'I have what I needed! Fellows like you, who do nothing but go walking, need neither chairs nor tables. If you had given me the money right off, your valuable furniture would still be in existence. You wished it so! Firewood would have been cheaper!'

Home Course In Modern Agriculture

X.—Some Insect Pests

By C. V. GREGORY, Agricultural Division, Iowa State College
Copyright, 1909, by American Press Association

AMONG the enemies which the farmer has to combat perhaps none are more troublesome than insects. Nothing is more aggravating than to have a promising crop of fruit or grain attacked by a horde of "bugs" and greatly injured if not entirely ruined.

Insects, like weeds, are very difficult to deal with if you go at them one at a time, but if properly managed they can be easily held in check. From the standpoint of the damage they do, insects may be divided into two classes—those which attack field crops and those which are injurious to fruit and garden crops.

There are a number of insects which attack corn. While these are seldom present in large enough numbers to destroy any considerable part of the entire crop, the money value of the damage they inflict on the corn grown on a quarter section each year amounts to no small sum.

One of the most important of these pests is the corn root worm. The eggs, which are laid in the cornfield during August or September, hatch during the next June or July. The worms when full grown are about one-third of an inch long and as big around as pins. They bore up inside the roots, injuring them so badly that the growth of the plant is seriously checked. Often, too, the roots are so weakened that the corn blows down badly. Some time during August the worm goes through a transformation called pupation, which changes it into a small light green beetle. This beetle feeds on the silks and tips of ears and lays eggs for the next year's crop of worms.

Another insect which lives on the roots of corn is the root louse. These lice are very small and helpless. They are kept through the winter in the egg stage in and hills. In the
